New Left Review (Connected Histories in Multiple Trajectories)

By Shomit Sirohi

Part I – The Originals

I. One set of connected Histories – Graeco-Roman world and Maritime Trade in Latin America, India and Arab World with American coastal trade

In fact one set of connected histories is maritime trade in the world of course but in specific sets of Greek centered ship processes mainly with Israel which then becomes also modern slavery in the Arab context beginning with Alexander and Macedonian conquest, which then produces the shift to modern systems of trade with the Israel and European Union and even American Financial Structure and World Bank but this then is linked now to India and parts of Argentina and Cuba-cinema and Algeria-cinema.

II. Criss-Crossing Kantian Speculations on Nomadology

Imagining migrant lives in this trading process much like Muzaffar Ahmad, a Communist in India making it to Europe by shipping in the early 20th century and Sirohian novels around Algerian ship vessels with Fanonian political slogans then is the process of in fact literary journeys in the shipping period which then makes maritime trade which though is also with migrant lives in Spain or France or even Algeria, and Cuba and even black America or India – migrant lives reflect therefore types of trade called earlier Hsuan Tsang trade behaviour which now is just a metaphor that capital also of course is migrant trade – which means a nomadology – imagine trade in finance being trade in South France shifted to the north of Paris then to Madrid -all of this is zoning done dynamically by EU for in fact the traffic argument it might seem – but actually for dynamics of trading and foreign trade in financial processes called EU dynamics of creating Eurozone.

III. Spain, France, Greece – Arguments on EU

Spanish austerity, French dynamics and Greek austerity – becomes in fact Spanish modernism, French dynamics with free lives and in fact Greek Mediterranean and unique mixed economics with some unique living arguments – which then is a new synthesis also of EU providing dynamic trade on FII, and FPI and planning some Greek retail arguments which though is against FDI.

Part II

On India

In fact a syntax of unique mixed economics which then is busy with American model forms of debate – a fiscal plan which goes in the direction of unique ideas in all directions – the argument being ideas like French education or in fact something like that as its general plan along with unique new public sector arguments from architecture in some parallax, to hotels with Tata which then makes it a unique public sector innovating beyond its traditional arguments.
